

Which Cellular Data Plan Is Right For You Newsletter Article

Hello Members,

It's nice to get so many positive replies about the usefulness of the newsletter. If you have a topic you'd like to learn more about please send me some suggestions.

Quite often I've been asked about mobility plans. Which company offers the best coverage, reliable service, flexible plans, best price, customer service, etc...? I've spoken with a few folks that are paying for unlimited data plans and don't even know if they need it. With all carriers offering unlimited talk and text a big consideration is size, speed, and price of the data plan. Not everyone needs an unlimited plan so why pay for something you don't use.

AT&T and Verizon keep records of your monthly data usage. If you view your bill online you can view the records and it even break down the usage of each user on the plan and the date and time of the usage. Knowing these things will help you determine which size data plan is right for you.

To save using up your mobile data allotment enable WiFi on your cell phone and connect to your home network. Also when away from home use Spectrum's free WiFi hotspots. It's an added feature for Spectrum Internet subscribers. The network name will display as Spectrum WiFi or CableWiFi. Use your mobile data only when there is no WiFi network available to join.

An article in How To Geek explains quite a lot to help you make an informed decision. Spectrum Mobile is not mentioned maybe because they are relatively new to offering mobile service. Click the link below for article.

<https://www.reviewgeek.com/42440/the-best-budget-unlimited-wireless-plans-cricket-vs-visible/>

Hope this tip will help save money on your cell phone service.

Karen Harker, Secretary